SPLIT IN AMISH CHURCH. New Generation Against the Practices of Their Parents.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. DECATUR, Ind., April 29.-Located in the southern portion of this county is a large settlement of Amish people. They own large farms, are thrifty, honest and exciusive, but have very peculiar religious beliefs and customs. They believe principally in the Old Testament and think everything in it should be obeyed. They have a reason and a biblical phrase for every act they religion and customs is their personal appearance. All ages of each sex dress exactly alike. Their clothes are all made in the old-fashioned style with no trimmings. The men and boys dress like Quakers, broadbrimmed hats and jean pants, but they never shave. In fact, they are distinguished by antique simplicity, combined with antique prejudice, and by indifference to the interests of the greater world. Another pecultar idea of this people is that the devil's spirit is concentrated in anything that revolves. They, therefore, will not have any of the improved farm machinery of to-day. They use the old-fashioned cradles, scythes He left to-day for Warren, this State, and and rakes and will haul their grain fifty says he will return here and give another miles to a thresher run by horse-power.

About two years ago the leaders in the church were arrested here for violating the marriage laws of the State. Full cousins had been permitted to wed and no marriage license procured. This was not done through ignorance, but was strictly according to their religious beliefs. The court, however, granted them leniency, and they complied with the matrimonial laws ever since. church which caused considerable excitement and no small amount of worry among the older members. The younger class of Amish, it seems, believe in being progressive and partaking of things worldly, as their seniors put it. They are purchasing the latest improved farm machinery, the women are using sewing machines, and dressing in the latest styles; the men shave and have their hair cut short and are using all the modern improvements and conveniences used in successful farming. All of which are contrary to the laws and beliefs of the old Amish faith. The older brethren are much alarmed over the matter, and are seemingly at a loss to know just what to do. They very much dislike to turn so many of their sons and daughters from the church and their firesides, yet they cannot retain them in the church and under their old belief. But the new faction will not give up their progressive ideas and convictions, which they argue are in harmony with modern Christian civilization. will build a large church edifice this summer, a committee having already been selected to choose a site on one of their farms. New Albany Preacher Wants Pay as Chaplain for the 159th. Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

NEW ALBANY, Ind., April 29 .- Rev. Dr. J. W. Clokey, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, stated to-day that he would probably file claim against the government for pay as chaplain of the One-hundred-andfifty-ninth Indiana Volunteers. He was appointed chaplain of the regiment shortly before war with Spain was declared and received his commission from Governor Mount. Shortly before the regiment left Camp Mount for Camp Alger he was compelled to resign on account of the illness of his wife. As he never received notice that his regi-nation was accepted he takes the position that he is still entitled to pay. Recently the records at Indianapolis were examined and Dr. Clokey found that they did not show that he had been chaplain of the regiment even for one day, although he has his commission and was on duty with the regiment at Camp Mount. He claims the records appear as though his name had been erased and the name of his successor sub-

CHICAGO, April 29.-So far as they have yet gone discussions along the Western roads in connection with the framing of a new agreement for the Western Passenger Association have been most harmonious. All the clauses of the agreement have been gone through, and no objection has as yet been urged to their adoption. Surface indications, if they can be depended upon, warrant the presumption that the revised agreement will go through with all the roads parties to it. Provisions relating to the organization and government of the various bureaus have yet to be taken up, and there is where danger of difference of opinion exists. Some hope has been expressed that the whole document will be ready for adoption by next Wednesday, when the meeting will resume its deliberations, but this is too sanguine a view to take of the matter. Some of the roads will not be prepared to vote finally by that time. At present there is every indication of a strong agreement being adopted.

The number of injured now reaches ninety-four, and some of these are so badly injured that they will in all probability die. The search among the ruins still continues. A peculiar feature of the cyclone was that out of thirty-one killed twenty-four were women and little girls. This is accounted for by the fact that the path of the storm was right in the residence district and at a time when the men had not all returned from business. Many terror-stricken women ran outdoors when the roar of the cyclone came, and in this way were either killed or injured by flying debris.
